Fiction Source one - The Gilded Ones

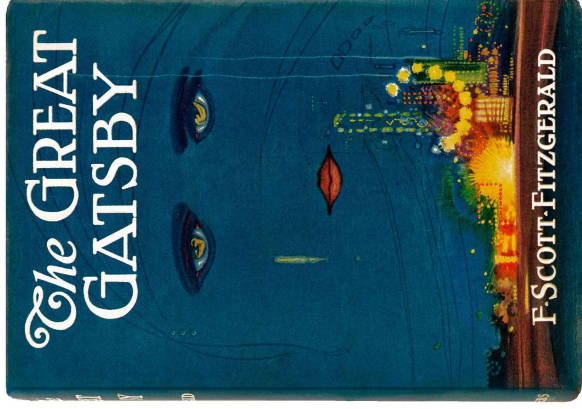

"I will not die here in this horrible place. I will not die before I discover the truth about myself. I'll survive, and I'll do so long enough to leave this place, long enough to find someone to love me who cherishes me the way Katya's betrothed does her. All I have to do is be brave for once." - Pg.150

In the novel The Gilded Ones, the whole story is mostly about a person's growing up. Among them, this quote is a scene in which the main character takes courage and grows through his vision and desire to survive.

This scene allows readers to focus more on and understand the emotions of the main character, Deka. The text shows deka's longing for the truth hidden in secret, her future, and deka's feelings from the perspective of other colleagues looking at her.

The audience for "The Gilded Ones" may include young adult readers who enjoy fantasy and dystopian novels. It will also appeal to readers who enjoy stories with strong female protagonists and themes of identity, power, and oppression. It may also appeal to readers interested in African culture.

Fiction Source Two - The Great Gatsby

"I hope she'll be a fool--that's the best thing a girl can be in this world, a beautiful little fool." - Daisy Buchanan

Daisy's role in the novel was to represent the social limitations imposed on women in the 1920s. So this quote means to be naive, carefree, unconstrained by societal expectations, and also implies that being a "poor" in this world is the best thing a woman can be.

The occasion in the quote begins with Daisy struggling with the social expectations placed on her as a woman at the beginning of the novel. However, Daisy feels trapped and unfulfilled in her own role and she wants more freedom and autonomy. That way, readers can see her growth from her point of view.

Most audiences of The Great Gatsby will find it interesting to read, except for young children. Because this novel can learn about the history of the United States in the past 1920 years.

NonFiction Source - J. K. Rowling: The Benefits Of Failure

"Failure stripped away the inessential, allowing me to focus on what truly mattered and ultimately led to success." - J.K. Rowling

This quote is from J.K. Rowling's personal experience of failure teaches viewers that failure can be a learning opportunity and a way to discover who you really are.

Through this speech, J.K. Rowling tells her experience of failure from a third-person perspective on her life, through which she emphasizes the importance of failure in personal growth and development and encourages her audience to accept failure as part of life and learn from it.

Most of the audience for this speech will be included, but it seems to be a speech that will help people who are moving into society or people who need encouragement and courage.

Mixed Media Source- Brené Brown: The Power of Vulnerability

"Vulnerability is not winning or losing; it's having the courage to show up and be seen when we have no control over the outcome." - Brené Brown

In this ted talk, Brené Brown emphasizes personal growth by having the courage to show your vulnerabilities rather than hide them. It suggests that vulnerability is a key component of personal growth, and that we must be open and honest with ourselves and others in order to fully experience relationships and grow as individuals.

Through her research and personal experiences, she emphasizes the importance of vulnerability in human connection and personal growth. This quote addresses the advice she finds on reducing the weight of vulnerability to personal growth.

This talk can be seen all over the internet using ted talk, but it looks like a video that will help people who are looking for ways to improve themselves.

Visual Source - Janet McDonald: Heart and Soul

Calm and upright posture

The drawing, the heart and soul, shows a tree growing from a person's heart.

This can be seen as allowing the meditator to calm himself down and expand his mind. Therefore, it can be related to one's own growth as one cultivates one's heart to be good. It can be shown that making a good heart makes a person grow more and more.

Artists use color and light to create atmosphere and atmosphere. For example, warm colors like yellow and orange were used to convey a feeling of growth and development and cool colors like blue and green were used to convey calm and reflection.

The artist placed the figure in the middle to show calm and uprightness.

The artist used images and symbols related to the subject of human growth, such as a tree or a growing person.
